Preceding varieties represent principally recent productions;—the height of perfection as at present attained by the hybridists of France, England and America. In addition to the above we have many more of the very recent introductions. These have been imported within the past year or two. In view of the fact that this list is being issued prior to the most critical period for the iris—March with its frequent alternate freezing and thawing, we refrain from listing until we have an opportunity to test their hardiness in this climate. Prior to the past season, we imported every variety which the European growers saw fit to give a name and price. The past season, new introductions were priced as high as $50 which with a 30% import duty, transportation, Federal Quarantine and uncertainties in general brought several of the varieties to a figure where our better judgment prevails.

We have all the varieties which can be bought at a sensible price and invite your want list covering such as are not above listed. Our complete list will be issued in May.

To those whose interest in the iris is in its value as garden material, we offer the following varieties. These are good varieties but not rare, having been in cultivation long enough to permit the growth of a considerable stock and hence sale at popular prices.
